Our Projects

The Frontier Museum was originally acquired and moved to its current location by the foundation and we participated in the design of the Southeast Utah Welcome Center. We look forward to adding an antique tractors and farm equipment museum. The Big 4 Tractor, one of a small number remaining in the world, has been restored to running condition and will be the major focus of the tractor museum.

Just across Main Street from the museum stands another major project, Young's Theatre. The theatre has been abandoned for decades. The foundation is raising funds for the restoration of the building as a community theatre/meeting facility and office space for the foundation itself. We look forward to hosting musicians, theatre groups, old movie revivals, and other exhibits and performers.

Assisting community groups with fund raising is a primary goal. We support, or have supported, local groups who have begun work toward the Colorado Plateau Discovery Center, who are beginning plans for an astronomy observation station, and who have built a Veteran's Memorial.

A 2004 community survey conducted by the Monticello Community Foundation revealed that 98% of respondents were interested in and supported our projects to bring cultural and economic opportunities to Monticello, 76% supported our efforts directed to historic preservation, and 82% were supportive of the development of new community facilities.

The Monticello Community Foundation will continue to search for funds for suitable projects, sponsor activities for the enjoyment or education of the community, and support communication and community participation in those activities, areas of interest, and issues of important to the residents.

Thank you for your interest in and/or support of our efforts! Please contact us with any questions. Your involvement will help make the Monticello Community Foundation a successful organization working for the benefit of the people of Monticello, Utah.

Donations are gratefully accepted and can be directed to a particular project if the donor so desires.
